NEWPORT, Aug. 15 .- The blue garden on the summer estate of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis James on Beacon Hill was dedicated to-night by a unique outdoor entertainment. "The Masque of the Blue Garden" was the title which Mr. and Mrs. James gave their entertainment, in which an old fable was enacted amid a natural and appropriate stage setting and before a company of more than three hundred guests. The fable required fifty-four profes-sional dancers, singers and musicians, be-sides several amateurs, some of whom were members of the crew from Mr. James's yacht Aloha and some of their

A stadium was erected at one end of the garden for the accommodation of the guests, and the whole garden appeared a myriad of electric lights, the trees, plants and flowers having their share of electric bulbs, while calcium lights helped to illuminate the grounds.

When the guests arrived from the numerous dinner parties given prior to the dedication they left their carriages and automobiles on the lawn and passing through a long illuminated and carpeted blue canopy were met by Mr. and Mrs. James at the east end of the garden. From there the guests found seats in the stadium, which had been built to carry out the idea of the sixteenth century period.

Mrs. James wore a costume of the same period, and after explaining the purpose of the entertainment she started the pageant with the wave of an electric wand. Corrad's orchestra at one end of the stadium played while the guests were assembling and also throughout the evening.

TWO QUEENS AND COURTS

First Honor Goes to Ruth Harris of This City-Mardi Gras at Night.

Long Branch, N. J., Aug. 15.—One of the features of the fifth annual baby parade here this afternon was the appearance in the procession of the queens of the midsummer festival and dollies and their courts. The two, Miss Annabel Lind of New York, Queen Elizabeth V., and six-year-old Levina Taber, of the dollies, were greeted by more than 20,000. The Boy Scouts of Eatontown led the parade, with twenty members of the Norwood Riding Club. The doll queen and court rode in a decorated float of white drawn by four ponies. There were fifteen divisions in the baby parade and doll division, and it was after 6 o'clock before the last award was made. The judges awarded the grand prize in

The judges awarded the grand prize in the baby parade to Thelma Worth, 2 years of age, of Deal. She was on a float representing the Deal Fire Department. The queen's prize went to Miss Ruth Harris, 10 years old, of New York city.
